Muslim Extremism for Law Enforcement Officials

This is an introductory course on Muslim culture, focusing on the factors contributing to Jihad, and offering examples of "home grown" terrorism. To combat this, participants will learn to understand and better communicate with Muslim people and therefore conduct more effective investigations. Causes and indicators of extremism and home grown terrorism are also explored, with discussion of documented examples. The first day covers basic culture and cross cultural communication while the second day focuses on indicators of jihadist extremism.

The course will feature a variety of teaching techniques to increase attentiveness and boost retention. Participants will learn the critical fundamentals, including:

- Why is this critical to your organization?
- What should happen in each department for the system to be effective overall?
- Who performs the respective tasks? How are their efforts coordinated and updated?
- When should things happen to boost effectiveness and efficiency?
- How are these tasks to be performed? What are the methods and metrics?

Technical Expertise:

Not only do we have deep experience in these areas, several of our experts worked formerly within the government where they authored key segments of the existing regulations and technical guidelines.

This course is designed for experts within U.S. Federal, State and local enforcement agencies (or foreign officials) who are responsible for improved investigative effectiveness through increased of Muslim culture.

Instructional System Design (ISD):

ISD is based on modern theories of adult learning, first distilling the critical knowledge, skills, and abilities of each subject area then developing targeted materials and delivery techniques using a combination of real-world case studies, field exercises, and interactive computer-based programs.
