This course focuses on the global proliferation threat and the collective international response that is orchestrated under the auspices of the U.N. Security Council Resolution #1540 (UN1540), which calls for nations to cooperate to develop and coordinate national, regional and international programs to combat this dire challenge. For U.S. Foreign Service Officers, this course will cover the current international "best practices" relating to UNSCR 1540, including Reporting Obligations, Licensing, Control Lists, Enforcement, and Transhipments. Customized Training

Technical Expertise:

Not only do we have deep experience in these areas, several of our experts worked formerly within the government where they authored key segments of the existing regulations and technical guidelines.

This course is designed for experts within Federal organizations who have reporting requirements under UN1540. Also for Foreign Service Officers who need to understand UN1540 so as to better discuss these matters while on overseas assignment.

Instructional System Design (ISD):

ISD is based on modern theories of adult learning, first distilling the critical knowledge, skills, and abilities of each subject area then developing targeted materials and delivery techniques using a combination of real-world case studies, field exercises, and interactive computer-based programs.

The objective is to imbue each training project with a customized methodology that is tailored to client-specific goals. ISD methodologies are considered to be state-of-the-art in adult learning today.
